Virginia Reconstruction.

It is more with sorrow than with any other emotion that we are obliged to acknowledge the fact that the spirit that inspired the Southern rebellion is not dead, although many are deceived by its partial smothering. The more public demonstrations of violent outrages by gangs of masked men have somewhat subsided through wholesome fear of President Grant's determination to have peace by all the means at his command; but secret, insidious plots for individual persecution for political opinions are not wanting, however well concealed under various guises and charges of a personal antagonism. Wherever it lurks, the old hatred of northern men and Republicans rears itself and is asserted with all its venom.

This view of the case in several of the other States, gives the pending canvass in Virginia a great deal of interest. In its attempts to be lenient towards rebels elsewhere, the Republican party has been basely betrayed, and in Virginia is measurably to be tested the question whether peace cannot be better maintained through the success of unyielding Republicanism than thro' a compromise with men who have so often shown their treachery and so persistently illustrated their untrustworthiness. Georgia is a living example to Virginia, and we believe the Republicans who are earnestly laboring in this campaign are fully alive to the importance of rescuing their State from the deplorable condition into which the leniency of their Georgia brothers has left them.

The Virginia Republicans have entered the field with flying colors under the square edged platform of sustaining the Congressional measures of reconstruction. While they do not propose to proscribe those rebels who have submitted in good faith to the rule of the government, they do propose to make their State prosper through the peaceful influence of Republican principles. They have put a most emphatically radical State and Congressional ticket in the field at the head of which is Gov. H. H. Wells, and presented the issue purely upon its merits.

The Democracy, suffering the general demoralization of this party throughout the country, avoid the issue by presenting a northern carpet-bagger named Walker for Governor, with the balance of the ticket indescribably mixed, and name the affair "conservative." "Col." Walker is a Republican by his own claim, but is no doubt one of those rare specimens who suit themselves to the necessities of any occasion. His chief recommendation is that he went to Virginia upon the Staff of Gen. Butler, and made himself rich in the commissary department. The party thus officered enters the field as usual, under a deceptive flag and makes many promises diametrically contrary to the dictates of the Democratic party. Success prospective covers a host of discrepancies, and the Democratic newspapers promise the adoption of the new constitution and that their candidates will support the administration provided they obtain the chance to engineer the reconstructed State.

With all their efforts to hood-wink the people by this mock-election style of campaigning, however, the followers are not disposed to surrender so easily, and they unguardedly expose their leaders to suspicion. They threaten to vote squarely against every section of the constitution, and to display by every means their disgust at everything having the odor of loyalty. In their haste to proclaim the real animus of the Democratic party they have developed the true value of their pinchbeck metal, and every day of the campaign serves to weaken their hold upon the peaceably disposed. By the sixth of July, the time the election occurs, therefore, the question must be pretty well narrowed down to one simply of reconstruction, which it would seem certain the sentiment of loyalty and the hope of future prosperity must settle in favor of the constitution and the Republican ticket.

ANNEXATION IN NOVA SCOTIA.—The N. Y. Times thinks that Mr. Murray's resolution and more particularly Mr. Murray's preamble, which the Halifax House of Assembly considered a week ago, has at least the merit of perfectly plain language. It begins by "most firmly denying the right of the Imperial Government to force a free people into any connections without their consent; but, at the same time, with a rather doubtful concession, it very pressingly admits the right of the Imperial Government to withdraw their protection." It declares that the old Government was forcibly changed without the consent of the people, whose petitions have been treated with contempt; that the Confederation has brought financial disaster and oppressive taxation, and made the Nova Scotians "a degraded people." And in fine, "whereas our principal commercial trade always will be, naturally, with the United States of America," and, whereas, there is "great injustice in keeping this heretofore loyal colony in a hated union," therefore Her Majesty is asked "that our beloved institution be restored to us, so that Her Majesty will be graciously pleased to absolve us from our allegiance to the British throne!"

Although the question has been temporarily disposed of adversely according to our dispatches yesterday, it received much favor, and its business indicates that it will not subside.

THE STATES OF GEORGIA.—It is ascertained from the White House that the case coming up from Georgia which was referred to the Attorney General has been reported back by that officer. He comes to such conclusions on some of the points involved that it was not necessary to consider the status of Georgia under the reconstruction act.

The Water Supply.

To the Editor of the Daily Whig:

Amongst the various articles in the Whig relating to the water, I have noticed three objections:—1st, the pipes will burst in cold weather; 2d, the expense of putting it into a house; 3d, the cost of the works, and will it pay? The first objection is remedied in Boston and elsewhere, by letting a small stream of water run continually from the pipes in cold weather.

To the 2d objection, I would say, that unlike gas piping, which requires pipes, brackets, &c., to every room lighted, the water pipe would merely want a connection from the cellar to the sink, with a brass faucet to stop it, the whole costing from three to five dollars—certainly not more than a common pump and setting.

And thirdly, will it pay? is an item of larger consideration, and depends to a measure on what will be its cost.

The cheapest and best water pipe and the kind that is destined to take the place of all other, is the shoot iron pipe encased with cement. The main pipe from Sebago to this city, as well as the distributing pipes, prove all made that why. And as I have taken considerable pains to learn the whole process—which I find to be very simple—I have no hesitation in saying that there are plenty of mechanics in Bangor competent to do the work, or all parts of it. I would therefore, on the score of economy make these suggestions:—

First—The Water Company furnish the iron and rivets to Bangor, and pay for the making of the iron pipes by the rod or for as second best.

Second—Ditching and filling could be done by the rod. The cementing and laying should be done by the day under charge of a good cement mason, of which Bangor has no lack. The hydrants could be made as cheap in Bangor as elsewhere, and there are plenty of unpatented samples to work from, in New York, Boston, Montreal and elsewhere. The reservoirs, whether of stone, brick or earth, could be let by the job, with the exception of a few water stops or gates, which would be of trifling expense. The above includes about all there is to a water supply.

Now, if the work is divided as above, the Company would get their works at a low rate, without having to pay large bonuses to foreign companies, who might not be more competent or able to do it, than ourselves. As to the contractors taking stock, I think it amounts to this: They are able to charge enough more on their bid, to the Company gains nothing.

FROM AN ABSENT BANGORIAN.

Portland, June 7th, 1869.

Political and Personal.

General Jack Hamilton is making an extended stumping tour in support of his pretension to be elected governor of Texas.

Efforts are being made in Tennessee to have Jones and Senter withdraw from the Gubernatorial race, in favor of Horace Maynard.

Speaking of Southern politics, Col. Forney says: "I think the Republicans will carry Virginia on the 4th of July. I think we shall carry Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida and Arkansas. Georgia is hopelessly gone, unless Congress again intervenes."

The President has submitted to the Attorney General for his opinion the question whether under all the circumstances and under the reconstruction acts Georgia is a State within the Union.

The Executive Committee of the National Union Republican Association have issued an able address to their countrymen, urging them to send delegates from every State and district, town, city and village to the Union to the National Convention, to meet in Farwell Hall, Chicago, on Independence Day, 1869.

Senator Morton was serenaded by some colored men in Indianapolis, Ind., one night last week, and in responding said he was convinced that the colored people would vote at the next general election in that State.

Another Political Murder.

[From the Raleigh (N. C.) Standard.]

We have waited for some days to obtain the facts concerning the murder of Sherill Colgrove. During this time we have carefully refrained from saying anything that could in any manner be construed as the expression of a partisan feeling. Our rule is to do justice to all men at all times, and in this instance we have followed up to the letter. We have seen slow-spoken assertions with the reputation of a muddled brain, with unlimited virulence and contemptible as to render the assailants unworthy the notice of honest men, yet we have remained quiet that we might not injure the innocent, or by publishing to the world the atrocities of a band of wicked men, injure the interests of the State. Why have not the Democratic papers pursued the same course? Why have they been so eager in their efforts to blacken the reputation of the murdered man, and to create sympathy for his assassins? Are they aware that the murderers belong to their own party, and are they defending them in advance? Such is the inference from their conduct. What are the facts? An officer of the law, who is universally disliked by his political opponents and loved by his friends, starts from his home to attend the trial of a noted criminal. He goes but a short distance when he is fired upon by assassins concealed by the roadside. A score of shots are fired by these cowardly murderers who dare not face one man. He falls from his horse mortally wounded. His companion is also shockingly wounded, but still has strength enough to escape. The assassins come forth from their concealment, and approach their victim. He still lives, but the hearts of his murderers know no pity. Their pistols are at his hold. Shot after shot pierces his brain, and Orson R. Colgrove is dead! These demons satisfied that their hellish work is complete, disperse confident that they cannot be discovered. They find the mutilated body of the murdered man, who but one hour before had left them in full vigor of manhood. His clothes are on fire from the close discharge of the weapons of the murderers. The ground beneath him is drenched with blood. His wounded companion is found. The dead and dying are borne to shelter. The dying man, knowing that he is near death, is sworn in the name of that God before whom he is so soon to stand. He knows one of the murderers. He swears this as the last statement of a dying man. The murderer's name is Haswell. A short while afterwards, and he is in the hands of the law. One incident occurs that is too strange, too significant, too revolting in its brutality not to be put before the world. Citizens of the country of which the murdered man was Sheriff, openly rejoice at his death. They are Democrats. Over his dead body, from whose ghastly wounds the blood has not yet ceased to flow, men declare that the act is good, that the "DIVIDING LINE HAS BEEN DRAWN, AND THAT EVERY WHITE REPUBLICAN WILL BE FORCED TO LEAVE THE COUNTY OR BE GOT RID OF IN THIS MANNER." These men are also Democrats.

To this pitch is their party hatred carried. We do not advocate any party retaliation, for the punishment of these murderers and their accomplices belongs to the law alone, and all law abiding and peaceful citizens may rest assured that the law will reach them. We call upon the people of North Carolina to express their horror of this brutal murder, and their detestation of the men who can approve it. We call upon the Democrats of the State to disown forever the men who have dishonored their State and the people, by upholding murder, or failing to do this, we call upon the honest men of the State, regardless of party, to crush root and branch, a party so vile, so brutal and so wicked. People of North Carolina, arouse, for your honor is in danger! Thieves and assassins shoot down your officers of justice at will, and MURDER stalks unrebuked in your midst!

We learn from the Boston Traveller that Sheriff Colgrove was a Northern man, well known to parties in Boston as a man of high character, integrity, and courage, and that a loyal man. That was his crime.

We see it stated that the Boston Post recommends Col. Ephraim K. Smart to the consideration of the Democratic Convention to meet here on the 29th inst., in accordance with its previous notion of putting the best man forward and of liberally invite discontented Republicans to come in and act with them. We are not aware of many Republicans acting to vote for Col. Smart, will on the contrary we think many Democrats would prefer a gentleman not quite so much advanced.

The Editor of the Patton Voice says:

"We have been at Bangor recently and talked with some of the leading and most influential citizens of that city about the Northern Aroostook Railroad. They say 'we want a railroad; it is for our interest to have a railroad penetrate the heart of Aroostook; we shall endeavor to do that which we know to be for our interest. There is no other purpose, or thought, but to put forward with all our energy a railroad to the Aroostook.'"

He expatiates somewhat upon this subject, which is of such vital interest to his section as well as to Bangor, and confidently expresses himself: "I see no one listen to the talk of those who predict that there will be no railroad built to the Aroostook for twenty years. Let the people of Northern and Western Aroostook, and of Northern Penobscot, believe they are to have a railroad. Make your plans just as if you knew it. We would reach us in five years. It improves your farms, gets your ground in readiness to raise large crops and large flocks for transportation. The railroad is coming. Look out for the Engine when the bell rings."

THE PRESIDENT'S SUMMER TRIP.—The crowd of visitors at the White House this morning was quite large, many persons being there to see the President before he leaves for West Point. He goes by a special car tomorrow evening, accompanied by his whole family, with Secretaries Rawlins and Cox. He has not yet determined upon his summer trip, but has invitations from every so many sources, north and west. He talks of spending some time at Long Branch, as also of making a trip to Illinois and the Plains, and will probably spend a couple of days in Boston next week.

Condition of the Grand Trunk Railway

CONCORD, N. H., June 9.

The Governor today transmitted to the Legislature the Report of the Railroad Commissioners relative to the Atlantic and Lawrence Railroad, which shows that one-third of the road in New Hampshire is in bad condition, the ties being all rotten and rails worn out.

Mr. Ray (of Lancaster) said the road was in shameful condition, and utterly useless as a means of transportation; that a freight train got off the track 18 times in one day. The Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, lessee of it for 999 years, and Mr. Hodgdon, much red tape in its management; freight trains run only from 12 to 6 P. M. [illegible] hour. It was so slow that stages could not run for it. Mr. Hodgdon had promised to put road in condition, which he had failed to do.

Col. Kent (of Lancaster) said the only railroad in Coos county, and [illegible] tion was of the greatest interest to people. While it was operated by an American Company it was in good condition; but from that time it was worse than any railroad in New Hampshire; [illegible] tirely uncertain at what time to expect a train or freight; the road was entirely [illegible] and it was imperative that the Governor and Council should order the Railroad Commissioners to see it put in proper condition.

The report was referred to the Railroad Commissioners.

deep its roots and multiply. Let it sway in the keen blasts of winter, let wooden the winged zephyrs of Summer, it shall ever be cherished as an fit emblem of those charmed memories which clustered around the deeds of these gallants. The roar of artillery has long been hushed, and the musky smoke which hung like a cloud o'er the dying scenes of battle has been dispersed by the radiance of victory, but these spots remain, and ever green with rich associations to charm the survivors, shall be more than charming still to the children of the coming age.

Here plant the willows and the trees remain, with their pendant foliage drooping as if conscious of the sanctity of the hallowed ground they cover,—hallowed truly by your tears. Heretofore your children will visit these graves as you do now, with uncovered heads and flowery wreaths, bending in reverence to a shrine so worthy of their homage.

There is a significance in the music of these birds which slow surround this scene; they do not visit the wild funeral dirge but with songs of life. Let the husbands, brothers and sons, never bitter mind grief and tears. But oh, ye bereaved, restrain the gushing anguish of your souls, these heroes are not dead but sleep. Some who number more were more of sterling piety and solid worth than who in times of peace delighted in the communion of saints, welcomed the dawn of the Sabbath and were worshippers in youthful church, whose spire meets our gaze; and in times of war God heard their prayers, though on the battle fields of strife. Others who made no profession of piety, but when in your midst were citizens good and true, and ready for every good enterprise. When the cry of treason was heard, and the clarion call to arms rang through this state, anxious for their nations flag, they gave their lives a sacrifice in its defence, and we fondly hope their spirits rest in peace.

They are not dead; in those souls there is concealed, the germ of life. This mortal must put on immortality; unending life streams through the portals of every tomb where your friends lie reposing, cheering with the thought that they are your friends still, and are not lost.

I am glad to console you this day with thoughts of that immortality which is by no means a dream, but which rests on the eternal Jehovah as its immutable foundation, who hast brought it to light through the gospel of Jesus Christ. He who ideas of the future were obtained only by the dim light of reason, when animated with strong desire for its immediate realization, could exultingly exclaim, 'O, glorious day! when I shall be admitted into the assembly of the wise and good, much more now we having the 'sure word of God' and living under the blaze of its revelations, confidently expect to share with our friends a glorious immortality. May we all participate in the resurrection of the just, when our risen forms shall welcome their long absent tenants, this completing in holy union our bright destiny commingling with those, who brought forth subdued kingdoms, wrought, righteousness, obtained promises.

Lastly, we valiant in fight turned to flight the armies of the aliens.

No they are not dead. Apart from the perpetual entity of every spirit, and the ever-during glories of the righteous, theirs is an immortality our spirits cannot share.
The life of this great Republic has been preserved by their death; the early manhood of this nation retains its majesty by their fall, and the black stain of slavery, has been effaced from the bosom of this fair land by martyr blood.

The years may fly on the wings of time and ages roll ceaselessly onward, but their earned laurels shall never fade, their glories never dim. They have purchased for their country a glorious future. Henceforth the principles of liberty and equality reign from the wild Atlantic shore to the peaceful slopes of the mild Pacific. No more shall the hoarse battle-cry destroy the harmony of America, but it shall catch the music of inspiration from every patriots grave, and here vast treasures, being used as sources of development, shall continue her sublime career, clinging with fidelity to the memory of her noble brave warriors or whose shoulders she is upward borne; grand and sorbed in her rising magnificence, she shall be hailed with admiration by surrounding nations, while she, clings out in trumpet notes again and again the key-note to all her victories, and the heart of every nation will beat a quick response as they hear "All men are created equal," which declaration is to you most precious, because sealed in the blood of your braves.

Come hither then with your flowers and your redeemed offerings, look, ye who are conscious, for these senses quick to catch the aroma of these flowers, but because the living are with you to record these grateful doings, and passing into history, future generations shall learn how you now appreciate the deeds of those who fell for their nations life.

Soldiers of the Grand Army of the Republic, I thank you for the honor of addressing you on this occasion and I trust that every returning anniversary will find you still faithful to the sacred ments of your departed comrades, and that around their graves you will renew the vows of the past, swearing fidelity to that glorious union you do nobly fought to perpetuate.

International Conference of Young Men's Christian Associations.

The following circular has been issued to the Young Men's Christian Associations throughout the country:

Dear Brethren:—As authorized by the resolution adjourning the Detroit Convention and after conference with the Reception Committee of the Portland Association the Executive Committee hereby designate the 14th day of July next for the meeting in conference of the Young Men's Christian Associations of the United States and British Provinces, at the city of Portland.
The meeting for organization will be held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of that day.

The basis of representation, as fixed at the 3rd proceeding Convention, allows three delegates to all associations having one hundred members or less; tional delegate for each additional hundred of members, or fraction exceeding fifty; but no delegation can more than fifteen members. The co tution of membership for this purpose to embrace all active members of associations who have paid their dues.

All arrangements in regard to and steamboat routes, reduction of fare, and entertainment of delegates, will be set forth in a circular, shortly to be issued by the Portland Association, whose Reception Committee is now actively engaged in this laborious work. It is hoped that this circular will answer, at a sufficiently early period, most of the necessary questions in regard to the preliminary matters of the Convention, and, thus, few needless letters of inquiry to either of the Committees be required on the part of tending to attend the Convention.

The Executive Committee proposes to submit to the Convention the following, as among the important topics, deserving careful consideration and practical action:

1—The need of buildings constructed and owned by the Associations, and the plans for the accumulation of building funds.

2—Monthly, social and business lings of the Associations; the objects of such, and how each is best conducted.

3—What forms of Christian side the special work for which the tions are organized, have been most cessful, and how have these been cell.

4—How may the German young men of the country be reached by our institutions?
In connection with this topic, Rev. E. W.
Otte, of the Milwaukee Association, will be invited to read an essay prepared by him on the invitation of the Executive Committee, for the Detroit Convention.

5—The relation of the Associations on this continent to each other, as independent organizations, but similarly ed, and having a common work and aim; and their united power to promote the cause of Christ among the young men of America.

6—Personal consecration to Christ essential to real success in association work, in its grandest sense, the conversion of young men.

It is presumed that the Lecture Bureau, created under a resolution of the last Convention, will submit a report of its work for the year, together with such suggestions as may be deemed material in regard to future efforts.

The report of Executive Committee will embrace some propositions in regard to the prosecution of the general work of the Associations, and also a report of the Pacific Railroad mission. There will be no lack of matter claiming the attention of the delegates to the Convention throughout the whole of its session.

Let every Association determine, if possible, to be represented at Portland by its very best men, by men who shall personify the spirituality, the energy, the philanthropy, the love for our peculiar work, whereby each Association is willing to be judged.
The membership should be closely scanned, in order to secure the selection of such delegates as shall concentrate in the Convention a body of representative young Christians, to whose devotion and earnestness a full recognition will not merely for the moment, but during the year to come. It is not necessary to send the delegates of former years, and the fact of previous attendance need not be deemed a man's best title to further honor in this direction, unless the journals of the Convention bear witness to his usefulness and influence in forwarding Association work by his presence. Select and send very best men.

It should be our prayer and expectation the approaching Convention may be the most successful and memorable one of all the series—in its fervor, its high tone, its powerful and permanent spiritual results, and its results of good fruit in the vineyard which we are aiming to cultivate.

Again, the delegates should bear upon their consciences the responsibility placing the Associations properly and credibility before the Convention, in matter of statistics, facts and reports, ship and practical interest in the Conference.
Entrust your delegates; brethren, do not fail to send such a statement of your condition, and your work will able the Executive Committee to spread before the country in the next 'Journal' complete summary of the work we are gaged in, and the workers whom God to perform it. Unless the delegates look carefully to this, they and we will fail to accomplish an important duty.

We remain, your brethren in the Lord, Cephas Brainerd, Frank Ballard, William E. Lee, James Stokes, Jr., Timothy G.
Salley Jr., Thomas Cochran Jr., Roswell Millet, Executive Committee.

Dr. N. T. True, writing to the Lewiston Journal says: Among the productions of Franklin county which are spoken of highly the Deane apple, known sometimes under the name of the blue office apple. is described as an excellent full looking and eating apple; of large size and will keep on shelves till February. The tree spreads low, and is hardy. It seems to be a great favorite among those who cultivate it. It originated, we believe, in Temple.

—Work is going on rapidly in preparing the material for the great bridge across the Mississippi at St. Louis. Owing to the high state of the water, nothing can at present be done in the construction of the piers and abutments, but work will be resumed about the middle of August.

THE 'EARLY SEBEC' POTATO.—I see that your correspondents are calling the Early Sebec potato a sort originating in our State. In doing so, they certainly are under a mistake. I have had much trouble with that name, but at last have, I believe got through with it. I happened to live just outside of Sebec, some years ago, while visiting a friend near Boston, a market gardener, he asked me to procure some seed potatoes for him—the Early Sebec—direct from headquarters. It was the first time I had heard the name, but as I am supposed to know something of the important events that transpire in horticultural in my immediate neighborhood, I therefore took special care to inquire of any man or woman ever claimed to have produced a good potato in the good town of Sebec. All my inquiries led on earth as obvious as my own. Recently I have learned that a fellow dealing in 'truck' in Bangor, who claimed to have lived once in Sebec—the town is probably none the better for it—to raise the wind, put into new name to a good old potato. The name is applied to a variety that was brought to this place by Mr. Wm. Mitchell of Dover, about forty-five years ago. Mr. M. then an old man, worked a long time in the Province of New Brunswick, receiving his pay as was the custom of the times, in silver coin, which he brought in his pack through the forest by way of Houlton. He found a potato in the Province so satisfactory to his taste, that he brought seed in that toilsome journey, from which the part of the State has rejoiced ever since to date correct all the errors we can as we sing along.
